Stakeholders	Interests/Needs
Eldery people	Maintain proper hydration to support health and prevent dehydration-related issues
	Use simple and reliable technology that helps them monitor water intake effortlessly
	Clear visual or auditory reminders to drink water
Families	Take care of their elders by ensuring they are properly hydrated
	Remote monitoring of the hydration level of their relatives
	Affordable and durable device suitable for household use
Hospitals, doctors, nurses at home	Hospitalize people if needed
	Send nurses at home for seniors
	Hygienic, easy-to-clean, and reusable device
	Meaningful estimation of water intake
EMS	Take care of elderly people
	Prevent any issues, ensure patients maintain adequate hydration
	Simple device setup and maintenance by staff
Public health actors/ Prevention	Check on elderly people to maintain optimal hydration during heat wave
	Reduce healthcare costs associated with dehydration-related illnesses, especially among elderly populations
	Promote public health and wellness through better hydration habits
Health care insurance	Reduce medical costs linked to dehydration-related hospitalizations
	Encourage preventive health behaviors among insured individuals
Investors	Association with an innovative and socially impactful product
	Participation in the growing health-tech market
	Return on investment through scalable market adoption
Suppliers	Demand for components or materials used in the device
	Long-term business relationships
Retailers	Expand their product offer with an innovative health technology
	After-sales support and warranty information
EPFL	Provide students with a practical and innovative project to develop skills in Product Design
	Promote research, experimentation, and real-world applications of course material
	Clear project goals, milestones, and deliverables from students